look at the amendments and so forth while they are speaking and see whether we want to continue with this one or perhaps go to the other bills. So, Senator DeCamp, would you like to...

CLERK: Mr. President, very quickly, the Executive Board will be meeting in Room 2102 right now, the Executive Board, Room 2102.

PRESIDENT: The Executive Board meeting now in Room 2102 for a very quick meeting.

CLERK: The Executive Board will meet in Room 2102 in just a few minutes, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT: The Chair recognizes the arrival of a distinguished delegation under the sponsorship of Senator John DeCamp. Senator DeCamp.

SENATOR DeCAMP: This is Mr. Liu. He is the new Consul General from the Republic of China. He is based in Chicago and these are one of the largest trading partners the United States has and particularly the State of Nebraska as a number of you in the body know. I thought he could just come and give you about a two minute "hello" and "welcome" and introduce the other two gentlemen with him and then some of you maybe want to talk to him later.

MR. LIU: Thank you.

PRESIDENT: Mr. Liu.

MR. LIU: Mr. President, Mr. Speaker, and the distinguished members of the Unicameral of the State of Nebraska. Senator DeCamp mentioned my country as one of the leading trading partners of the United States. In fact, I want to second his proposal. I just come across an estimate by the American Department of Commerce that Taiwan ranked 7th last year of all of the trading partners of the United States. Though it is a land, a small land very far in distance, Taiwan had a trade volume last year second only to Canada, Japan, Germany, and England if we do not count two oil exporting countries, Saudi Arabia and Mexico. We are crowded with almost eighteen and a half million people on a piece of land almost just one-sixth of the area Nebraska has. However, our people share quite something in common with the people in Nebraska. We do uphold ideals of Democracy and freedom. We are determined to achieve those objectives. We share the same commitment to peace and justice. We also share the same work ethics. Basically,
